Steve Troxler Commissioner

The 2007 farm bill is on a lot of people's minds today as Congress is set to begin reviewing President Bush's proposal that was released in late January.

We were fortunate to have U.S. Agriculture Undersecretary Thomas Dorr speak on the farm bill at our Agricultural Development Forum just a day after the proposal was released. The timing couldn't have been better. He highlighted some of the goals and areas of focus of the administration's proposal. In addition, we had the presidents of the American Farm Bureau and The National Grange, as well as former Texas congressman and agricultural advocate Charles Stenholm, weigh in on challenges with the farm bill.

Some key points I gleaned from Undersecretary Dorr's presentation:

-- Money for programs will be tight;

-- There will be a wider range of groups interested in farm bill policies than ever before, each with its own agenda;

-- Money would be earmarked for beginning, young and disadvantaged farmers;

-- More focus on funding conservation programs to avoid international trade issues involving subsidies;

-- A move to increase funding for specialty-crop programs;

-- Focus resources on developing alternative, renewable energy.

I was pleased by the proposal to target more funding to young and

Ag Forum draws national ag leaders, congressional staff

■ Program focused on challenges of 2007 farm bill

About 200 people joined Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler at the second annual Agricultural Development Forum at the State Fairgrounds in Raleigh to hear from Washington insiders and national ag leaders about what to expect when Congress begins debating the 2007 farm bill. With so much riding on this year's bill, interest by agriculture groups and farmers was high.

Featured speakers at the February event included U.S. Agriculture Undersecretary Thomas Dorr, former U.S. Rep. and agricultural advocate Charles Stenholm, American Farm Bureau President Bob Stallman and Bill Steel, president of The National Grange. Staff members from North Carolina's congressional delegation also answered questions and spoke about challenges they expect to see.

Dorr outlined highlights of the Bush administration's 2007 farm bill proposal, which included proposals to increase fruit and vegetable purchases for school meals, increase funding for conservation programs, increase specialty crops grants and research, support development of alternative energy technology and provide financial support for beginning and young farmers.

"The 2007 farm bill is an opportunity to do something to reinvigorate rural America," Dorr said. The intent of the administration's proposal is to make farm bill programs "more predictable, more equitable, able to withstand review in trade and ensure wise use of tax dollars."

While several of the administration's recommendations could be beneficial to North Carolina farmers, agricultural leaders and congressional staff noted that finding the funds for all the programs will be a challenge.

American Farm Bureau President Bob

Stallman noted the varied interest groups now vying for consideration and funding in the bill among the challenges lawmakers face. "You have competing goals with conservation groups, hunger and nutrition groups, rural development, etc. There are lots of issues people want to lay on the farm bill," Stallman said.

Regional agricultural considerations were also cited as a challenge because recommendations that benefit farmers in beginning farmers. One of the things I talk about frequently with groups I meet is the need to get more young people interested in careers in agriculture.

Undersecretary Dorr summed up the need to help young and beginning farmers the best. “I’m 60 and when I go to farm meetings in my area, I’m one of the youngest at the meetings. We’ve got a problem with that,” Dorr said.

As I have said on many occasions, trends show that we have an aging farming population, fewer young people are pursuing careers in agriculture and the demand for food is expected to increase significantly in the next 25 years. All those point to a potential crisis in agriculture in the future if we do not slow or reverse some of these trends. Directing money toward young farmers is a step in the right direction.

As most of our guest speakers mentioned, more and more non-agricultural groups are interested in the farm bill. Congressman Stenholm noted that there were just three main groups involved in the first farm bill he voted on more than 20 years ago. This bill will involve 250 individual organizations. Conservation groups, energy groups, farm groups and more will seek to secure spending and policies favorable to their objectives.

Stenholm and American Farm Bureau President Bob

Stallman also said education of lawmakers will be important because of a significant number of changes on the agriculture committees. In fact, both estimated that only about a third of the current members had served during the development of the 2002 farm bill.

Education remains a critical need both nationally and locally, as we have become a more urban nation with less connection to the farm. We have to be the ones sounding the horn on agricultural issues if we want to see results.

Staff members from North Carolina’s congressional delegation also reminded forum participants about the importance of contacting their legislators and voicing their opinions about farm policy and farm bill details. They assured us it does matter and it is listened to.

There remains a lot of work to do to craft a final farm bill. We will be watching these proceedings closely and offering input as needed. Legislators will be hearing from many groups on these issues and it is important agriculture’s voice is heard.

As congressman Stenholm said at the forum, “There are more of us than them.” We need to make sure we do our part to address agricultural issues so they do not get pushed aside in the discussions.

North Carolina leads nation in loss of farms ... again

North Carolina lost 1,000 farms during 2005, tying Florida and Tennessee for first place in the nation, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture. These latest numbers continue a trend in North Carolina, which lost 3,000 farms in 2004, also tops in the nation.

"North Carolina is a leading agricultural state, but losing farms is one category where I don't want us to be No. 1," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. "Farm loss has become a chronic problem here. We've lost more than 6,000 farms and 300,000 acres of farmland since 2002.

"Development pressure and economic uncertainty make a deadly duo for family farms," Troxler said. "And fewer farms mean fewer jobs."

North Carolina had 48,000 farms at the beginning of 2006, down from 49,000 a year earlier, according to USDA's annual report on farm numbers and acreage.

Aside from Tennessee, North Carolina's neighboring states fared better. South Carolina gained 100 farms during 2005, Georgia saw no change and Virginia lost only 200 farms. Nationally, the number of farms declined by 8,900 during 2005, the report said.

Troxler said his top priority during the 2007 legislative session is to obtain funding for the Agricultural Development and Farmland Preservation Trust Fund.

The General Assembly created the trust fund in 2005 to provide money for programs that preserve working farms and protect farmland from development. Unlike some state trust funds, the ADFP Trust Fund does not have a dedicated source of funding and must rely on the legislature for appropriations. The fund received $50,000 in 2005 and nothing last year.

"Agriculture employs 17 percent of our state's workforce and contributes $68 billion to the economy," Troxler said. "As global demand for food increases, we can't afford for farmland to be taken out of production. We must put more resources into preserving our family farms."

Farm Bill

the South may not benefit farmers in the Midwest. North Carolina lawmakers will need to build support with legislators from other states and regions for programs that may benefit farmers in their congressional districts. Education is the key, Stallman said.

"We need to tell our story," he said. "People who vote and have opinions today don't have a connection to agriculture."

Steel, the Grange president, agreed. "The challenge to educate our non-farming population is tremendous," he said.

Stallman and Stenholm agreed immigration reform that includes a viable guest worker program, facilitating trade, and developing reliable, renewable energy sources would be key issues for Congress to address this session. Stallman was encouraged about immigration reform because of comments President Bush made in his State of the Union address.

"Trade issues matter, but we have to have trade first," Stallman said. "We'd like to see increased access for agricultural products into other countries and markets."

ional offices talked about renewable fuels and the opportunities they may present for N.C. farmers.

"The energy crisis is not going away and interest in renewable fuels is not going away with the rise and fall of gas prices," said Chris Wall, legislative assistant to Sen. Richard Burr. "Congress is bending over backward to see if we can reduce our dependency on fossil fuels."

Robert Harris, legislative assistant to Rep. G.K. Butterfield, said farm groups can help support the biofuels movement.

"Renewable energy is something America has to catch up on. We have to make our own fuel if we are going to sustain ourselves as a super-power nation," Harris said. "The farm bill isn't the avenue, but the ag community can certainly be a voice in letting (people) know we need to get on board with renewable energy."

The Agricultural Development Forum was hosted by the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services as a way to update growers on important industry issues.

New agronomist serving central area of Eastern N.C.

Dianne Farrer has joined the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services as the regional agronomist for Carteret, Craven, Greene, Jones, Lenoir and Pitt counties. She is based in Greenville. Farrer, formerly of Provo, Utah, replaces Bob Edwards, who retired last September after 21 years of state service.

"Dianne is a welcome addition to our staff," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. "She comes to us with a strong background in soil fertility as well as horticultural and agronomic crop production. She will be a valuable resource for area growers."

Farrer is a graduate of Brigham Young University where she earned a bachelor's degree in horticulture and a master's degree in agronomy, with emphasis on soil fertility. She received her doctorate in crop science from N.C. State University. Farrer's experience includes four years in the greenhouse/nursery industry and a year of research at Duke University.

Regional agronomists are part of the Field Services Section of the NCDA&CS Agronomic Division. They work with growers to help them improve yields and reduce fertilizer expenses by identifying and managing plant growth problems, especially those related to soil fertility and crop nutrition. They make on-site visits, assess problems, demonstrate sampling techniques and give advice based on agronomic test results.

Growers in Farrer's six-county region are encouraged to contact her directly. She can provide advice on a wide range of agronomic issues, including liming, nutrient management, crop fertilization, soil testing, plant tissue analysis, use of animal wastes and composts, nematode assay, and testing of source water and nutrient solutions. She is available at (252) 830-1718 or by e-mail at dianne.farrer@ncmail.net.

Agrotip

Check source water used in greenhouse and nursery operations and correct any SAR (sodium adsorption ratio) problems.

Water used in plant production, including greenhouse-grown tobacco transplants, should have an SAR value of 4 or less. For ornamental plants in a nursery setting, SAR values of 10 or greater are cause for concern. High SAR values are most common for water samples from coastal areas.

A high SAR value on a solution analysis report indicates an imbalance among sodium (Na), calcium (Ca) and magnesium (Mg) cations. This imbalance can cause leaf burn due to foliar adsorption of Na. In mineral soils, this imbalance can also lead to poor soil structure, which hinders infiltration of water. In soil-less container media, however, this effect is negligible.

The best way to reduce SAR to the desired level is to add calcium from a source such as gypsum.

To calculate the amount of gypsum needed to reduce SAR to 4, follow these steps.

1. Calculate the amount of calcium required in parts per million (ppm).

where Na, Mg and Ca are the ppm concentrations listed on the Solution Report.

2. Calculate the appropriate rate of gypsum (22% Ca) to apply by inserting the Ca needed value from step 1 into the following equation.

N.C. commodities featured in winning State Fair recipes

N.C. Apple Association’s winning recipe

Sandra Wolfe, a senior Appalachian State University accounting major from Fuquay-Varina, won $200 for her Harvest Apple Soup recipe in the N.C. Apple Association’s cooking contest at the State Fair. Her mom, Janice Wolfe also of Fuquay-Varina, took home honorable mention for an Apple and Ham Cheddar Braid.

Kathy Shortt of Garner took home the red ribbon and $150 for her Apple and Sausage Breakfast Bake.

Kelly Crowley of Cary won third and $75 for the Apple Sage Tartlets recipe.

The entries were judged on taste, appearance and creative use of apples. Each recipe needed to use at least two cups of North Carolina-grown apples.

The winning recipe follows:

Harvest Apple Soup

·1 teaspoon butter

·2 cups apples, peeled and diced (Wolfe used Gala apples)

·1 tablespoon chopped onion

·1 can (14 ounces) low sodium chicken broth

·1 can cheddar cheese soup

·1 cup sweet potatoes, cooked and mashed

·1/2 cup half and half

·1/4 cup bacon, chopped

·1/2 teaspoon black pepper

·2 teaspoon curry

·garnish of bacon bits

Mix butter, apples, onions, chicken broth, cheddar cheese soup, sweet potatoes, half and half. Simmer in medium sauce pan five to 10 minutes. Add bacon, black pepper and curry. Use a hand blender until well blended. Serves 4.

Winning N.C. Pecan Association recipe

Felice Bogus of Raleigh took home a blue ribbon and $100 for her Mediterranean Salmon with Pecan-Mint Pesto in the N.C. Pecan Association Pecan Recipe Competition at the N.C. State Fair.

Angela Byrd of Raleigh took second place and $50 for Pecan Banana Pudding, and Janice Wolfe of Fuquay-Varina won third place and $25 for Chicken Pecan and Fruit Braid.

All recipes had to use one cup of North Carolina pecans. Entries were judged on taste appeal, appearance, creative use of pecans and ease of preparation.

The winning recipe follows:

Mediterranean Salmon with Pecan-Mint Pesto

Pesto:

½ cup toasted pecans

2 cups packed mint leaves

6 cloves garlic, unpeeled, boiled for 45 seconds

7 ounces olive oil

Pinch of salt

½ grated Parmesan cheese

6 cups mesclun or spring salad mix

6 salmon filets, 4-6 ounces each

½ -1 cup prepared balsamic vinaigrette, as needed

1 pint cherry or grape tomatoes, halved

12 ounces feta cheese, crumbled

½ cup toasted pecans, coarsely chopped

Peel and mince boiled garlic cloves. Crush mint leaves until bruised. Place ½ cup pecans, garlic, mint, olive oil and salt in a food processor and process until smooth, scraping down sides of bowl as necessary. Transfer mixture to a small bowl, stir in cheese and add salt to taste. Cover with plastic wrap and set aside.

Toss salad greens with ½ cup vinaigrette until well coated. Toss in tomatoes, feta cheese and ½ cup toasted pecans. Divide salad among six plates. Heat grill pan and spray with cooking spray. Season salmon filets with salt and pepper and grill until fish flakes easily. Place each filet on a plate and top with the pecan-mint pesto. Serve warm or at room temperature with additional vinaigrette on the side.

POLICY FOR ADVERTISING IN AGRICULTURAL REVIEW

Following are guidelines for advertising in the Agricultural Review. Adherence to these rules will ensure quick processing of ads. Ads not meeting the following guidelines will be rejected.

General Rules:

· Advertising is a service to North Carolina residents only. A North Carolina address and phone number are required for submitting ads.

· There is no fee for advertising.

· The editor or advertising manager reserves the right to accept or reject any ad and to edit ads to meet requirements or space limitations.

· Priority will be given to ads that are strictly related to agriculture.

· Advertisers must limit their ads to 30 words or less. This includes first and last name of advertiser, complete address and phone number with area code.

· Ads must include first and last name (not farm name) and a phone number. A mailing address may be substituted for a phone number in the ad, but advertisers must provide a phone number with their ad submission. Advertisers who wish to list a cell phone number in their ad must also provide a home phone number, even if the home number is not to appear in the ad.

· Ads will be published in one issue only. Ads that are to be repeated must be submitted for each issue.

· Only two ads per family per issue will be accepted. Family refers to all individuals sharing the same residence, mailing address or home telephone number. These ads must be under separate categories.

· All “For Sale” and “For Rent” ads must have a price or price range. Ads for stud service must also include a fee.

· The ad deadline is noon on the first working day of the month prior to publication. (For additional information, see page 2 for list.) For example, if you want your ad to be published in the June issue, we must receive it by noon on May 1.

· A combined November-December issue of the Agricultural Review will be published in late November. The advertising deadline for this issue is noon on Monday, Oct. 15.

· The Agricultural Review accepts ads in good faith and does not assume responsibility for transactions resulting from the use of this publication.

Rules for Specific Categories:

Equipment for Sale: Priority will be given to equipment used in cultivating, harvesting or storing agricultural products.

Farmland: The tract must be a minimum of three acres used for agriculture, e.g. cultivation, raising livestock, poultry or other farm commodities. Ads for land for hunting also will be accepted, as long as the tract is at least three acres.

Farm Supplies: Priority will be given for items that are used in cultivating, harvesting or storing agricultural products. Ads for rough-hewn timber suitable for barn construction are accepted; ads for finished lumber products are not. Finished lumber includes, but is not limited to, planed wood, tongue-and-groove wood, remilled wood, and wood for home interiors or woodworking projects. Logs are not accepted.

Horses and Supplies: All horses offered for sale or stud that are 6 months of age or older must have a negative Coggins test for equine infectious anemia. Proof of EIA testing must accompany the ad each time the ad is submitted. This information must include the date of the last test – within one year of the month the ad will be published – the accession number, test result, and the name and address of the lab that administered the test. All ads submitted without complete or current Coggins test information will be rejected.

Small Animals: All pups/dogs 4 mos. of age or older must have current rabies vaccinations to be advertised for sale or at stud. Ads must include the age the pup or dog will be during the month of ad publication. Advertisers should submit a copy of the rabies certificate or a statement listing the date of the rabies shot and the name of the veterinarian who administered the vaccination. Ads are restricted to herding, hunting (gun dogs and scenthounds) and flock guard breeds only. We will follow the United Kennel Club breed list to determine groupings. Please see the comprehensive list of breeds that are accepted online at www.AgReview.org. Rabbits are accepted.

Poultry: Ads are restricted to meat and competition birds only. No domestic birds will be allowed. Examples of domestic birds include, but are not limited to, parrots, budgies, cockatiels, Macaws, parakeets and canaries. Several species of game-raised birds require a dealer license from the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission. Call (919) 528-3374 for more information.

Trucks and Trailers: Trucks must be pickups, flatbeds or similar models. SUVs, RVs, campers and camper shells are not accepted. ATVs and Gators are accepted, but golf carts are not.

ITEMS NOT ACCEPTED:

Any non-agricultural item under any circumstance.

Any item or property located outside North Carolina.

Ads from commercial establishments or dealers. Included in this category are dealers in real estate, farm machinery, livestock, feeds, seeds or fertilizers, commercial nurseries, pet shops, puppy farms, kennels and antiques shops.

Building materials or furnishings from old farmhouses or barns. This includes, but is not limited to, wood flooring, cut timber beams, mantels, brick, slate and clawfoot bathtubs. Complete barns are accepted.

Dog supplies, hobby supplies, toys, models, cats, rodents, wild animals or wild and domestic-mixed animals.

Clothing.

Items that have not been inspected and certified as required by N.C. Nursery Law and regulations prior to movement or selling. Contact the Plant Industry Division, 1060 Mail Service Center, Raleigh, NC 27699-1060, or (919) 733-3933, for more information.
